"Afraid I might fall?" he asks, his eyes darkening.
"Yes," I whisper.
"Me too." The rasp of his voice is deeper now.
Raw, and huskier. It reaches my heart and drips slowly down to my thighs. My insides are like melted butter.

Uncle Tor. My father's best friend. Fifteen years older than me. The man who babysat me more times than I could ever count. The man who taught me how to ride a bicycle. He's been there my entire life - when my father was away, and when my mother was no longer there. He's always been my rock. And now, I don't want to be the sweet little niece anymore. I want to be the woman on the back of his bike, and in his bed. I was born to be his.
